COLLEGE

It has been fun to learn that college is not like the visions that we had of it when we pored over catalogs while still high school seniors. We have learned that college is life itself, not the popular college life of football games, dances, dates, and cramming for exams, but an effort to learn what place we hold in the adult, turbulent, mature world that we have entered. The football games, the dances, the dates, and even the studying that we have done has merely been a small part of the learning to be an adult member of our human society.

We have learned to discriminate — in building friendships, in our participation in the political system of our country, in the making and maintenance of traditions, and in the building of our own personalities. We have learned to be courageous — to be firm in our convictions, but willing to change them if the convictions are proven wrong, to accept the responsibility that is necessarily ours as a member of a democratic, free society, and to foster a better world in which we can all be equally free.

DR. JOHN T. CALDWELL

Our PRESIDENT

Dr. Caldwell has been one of the chief motivating factors in the progress made by Alabama College in the last few years, and, although we doubt that the college shall have the good luck to claim him as her own in 2000 A.D., we know that the progressive, forward-looking school of that day will owe much of her success to our present, friendly president.

TRADITIONS

MILDRED WOOTEN
Miss Alabama College

at ALABAMA COLLEGE

One of the things that we have learned from life at college is the fact that we must have traditions in a well-rounded, well-ordered society — traditions which we must maintain until either their utility or their beauty is erased by the passage of time. Alabama College has its traditions, ranging from the attractive Miss Alabama College to that time-worn, but beautiful landmark — the water tower. We love the traditions which have been handed down to us by past generations of students — Crook Week, College Night, an ideal of student government, a Christian way of living, justice, and friendliness — and shall seek to maintain them, changing only those that are outmoded and no longer of significance to our college community.

MISS DAWN S. KENNEDY, Head of the Department of Art, began her work at Alabama College in 1934. She holds B.S. and M.A. degrees from Columbia University. Through her respect for, and encouragement of creative efforts, many talented girls have found a medium through which they can express their emotions or their attitudes.

is a jealous

The art department of Alabama College has a high aim—one of providing a liberal education for all the students an the campus thraugh classwork, cooperation with other departments and campus organizations.

Specialized training is available to individuals interested in art education, interiar design, costume design, commercial art, industrial design, and fine arts.

In addition, the art department serves the people of the state by its cooperation with art education work shops, art organizations, and civic organizations.

JOYCE CLEMENTS was elected the most outstanding artist of the school at Elite Night in October. She has the additional honor of holding the highest schalastic record af the class af 1950.

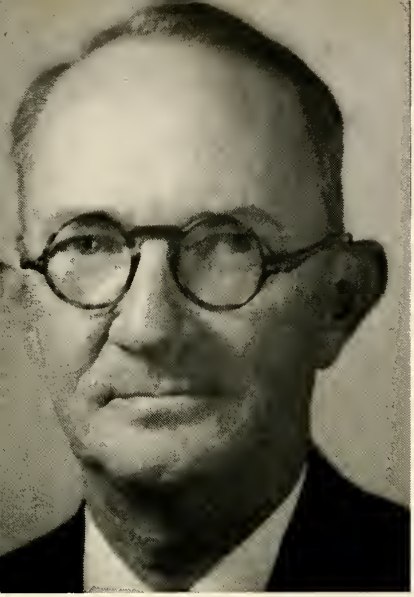
By a student body election, Betty Pendletan and Lila Huger were chosen as the mast outstanding students in the field of science. Bath girls have excelled in their field during their four years at Alabama College. Betty, a member of Beta Beta Beta, the national honorary bialogy fraternity, was named Biologist and Lila was chasen as Chemist.

Professor of physics and Head of the Department of Physical Science, Mr. W. J. Kennerly has been a member of the faculty since 1920. He received his B.S. degree at Clemson College and his M.S. degree at Emory University.



'Tis EDUCATION

Ably heading the Department of Education is Dr. M. L. Orr, who holds his B.S. degree from the University of Alabama, his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Peabody College. Dr. Orr is also director of the laboratory schools and is director of the College summer session.

DR. A. C. ANDERSON

It is only after many long and serious hours of teaching and conferences that certified teachers graduate from Alabama College. The Montevallo High School serves as a laboratory school in which, under expert supervision, the future teachers practice what they have learned in numerous courses of theory. Dr. Anderson, on call at all hours of the day, is the official adviser through the year, and, after he sees "his girls" through their hardest hours, places them in positions throughout the state.

Alabama Collge was the first college in the state to introduce instruction in Home Economics, and the first to establish a home management house. Institutional management experience is provided in the public school cafeteria. A nursery school is maintained by the college to provide practical experience for students taking courses in child care and training.

DR. LOIS A. ACKERLEY is director of the School of Home Economics. Holding A.B. and Ph. D. degrees from the University of Iowa, Dr. Ackerley has been at Alabama College since 1934.

FACTS and

A project of the Mathematics Department which arouses considerable interest on the campus is the annual exhibit showing the wide applications of mathematical principles to the physical, biological, and social sciences, engineering, the arts, and other fields of learning. Students who attend the annual mathematics party see the many recreational aspects of mathematics—building magic squares, working mathematical crossword puzzles and contests, and performing match and coin tricks.

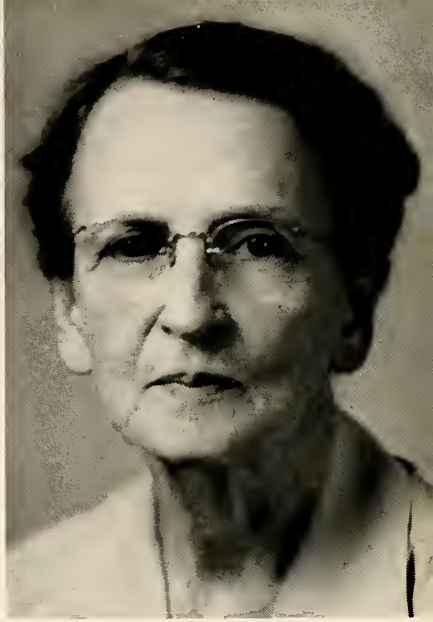
FIGURES

The Department of Mathematics undertakes to give the fundamental training necessary to prepare students of mathematics to become teachers, or to enter those vocations for which mathematical training is necessary. Courses in mathematics are designed to further the goals of general education by affording training in precise, clear, and logical thinking, and by developing an appreciation of the nature of mathematics and its contributions to civilization.



The Head of the Mathematics Department is Dr. Rosa Lea Jackson who holds her A.B. degree from Western College, and her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Chicago. She began her work at Alabama College in 1931.

is a mirror of the soul

MISS ELLEN-HAVEN GOULD, Head of the Department of Speech, has been on our campus since 1925. She holds degrees from Coe College, Northwestern University, and the University of California.

The Speech Department furthers its aims through numerous speech courses and extra-curriculor activities. Its first aim is to present speech as a means of communication. This is done through courses in generol speech improvement, public speaking, and debate.

Speech as a science is effectively shown in the speech correction laboratory. In this phase of their work, students are able to study speech —handicapped children in the departmental clinic.

The radia department offers another means of creative work in the production of its five educationol broadcasts.

Courses in interpretative reading enable students to develop their individual talents in the interpretatian of great works of literature. Thus, thraugh presenting speech as a means of communicatian, as a science, and as an art, the Speech Department strives to maintain a well-raunded speech education program.

RUSTI RANKIN, although voted the best actress of the campus does not confine her talent to acting. She has been active in intramural discussion taurnaments, and has done much work in interpretative reading, giving as her recital an original review of the current broadway success "Death of a Salesman."

CLASSES

Perhaps, in 2000 A. D., a method of learning while lying comfortably in bed, may be stumbled upon, but in 1950, we were still rising lethargically from the bed at seven in the morning to rush madly to our eight o'clock classes. Of course the minute we got there we went back to sleep again. But, somehow, between the ringing of bells, we managed to partake of a little learning — enough to know that class work — although the bane of a student's life — is really an enjoyable part of college life.

We learned about history — how pre-historic man struggled to better his existence, until now, he may so violently struggle as to destroy himself. We read Plato — and agreed and disagreed. We listened to music—and had long debates about the comparative merits of Beethoven and Shostakovich. We entered eagerly into the wrangle about who was to be the next governor. We wrote novels, read novels, and lived novels. We learned the rules of grammar, and then learned that rules weren't important after you knew them — that language changes when the common man speaks it. But we still taught the rules of grammar to the high school pupils. We learned that institutions are only instituted for the convenience of the people. We lost our faith and regained it — stronger than before. We learned about family life, cooking, philosophers, events of history, how to speak, how to write, how to paint, but — best of all — we learned about life.

The SENIORS

With the sentimentality of departing seniors, we think it was fun to grope blindly every morning at seven from Tutwiler to the dining room. We fondly remember the way the juniors looked when we marched into Hanson in the dead of the night, and forget about how hard it was to leave our nice warm beds. We remember the wonderful times we had in Tut and forget the many times we yelled "Quiet Hours" in a strident voice.

But we do remember that our four years of college was a wonderful time for us, a kind of pause in which we prepared to fling ourselves into the swift current of modern life. It's been fun — Crook Week, College Night, Canasta games, bridge, even poker, but it's been serious, too. Those hours of studying weren't done in vain, but were attempts on our part to be the mature individuals that so soon was to be demanded of us.

The JUNIORS

It's been an exciting year for us. The Junior week-end — dance and all — the Seniors marching, the secret class meetings while we were trying to decide what the Seniors were going to do, the spring elections when we were more concerned about who was going to be the next President of Student Government than who was going to be the next Governor — yes, it has been exciting.

We've come just far enough to begin to realize what college can mean to us — just far enough to get a thrill when we think about being "dignified Seniors". This is the year that we started concentrating on our major work, when we finally made up our minds exactly what we were going to do. Friendships have become more dear to us. Dates are a little more serious; we think of buying silver for our hope chests rather than a new pair of earrings. Our whole existence has become more serious, but it's a seriousness that has a tinge of newness in it — a tinge that makes the whole year take on an exciting glow.

The SOPHOMORES

The newness of college has disappeored for us, and we have finally settled down to some hard work. Sociology exams, Psychology test, Biology turtox sheets — they have us spinning. But we manage to take time-out to look over the newest fashion magazines, make short trips to Birmingham, date the Pi Kappa Alpha that found his way over from the University, and even see the latest movies. We munch on Vienna sausage sandwiches and drink cokes while we discuss the next trip to Davies Falls. And we'll never forget the April's Fool banquet that we gave the Seniors — pancakes, then cereal, then tomato juice. It was all backward, but that's not the way we're going. Next year, we'll really have to make up our minds about our life-work, but this yeor, we've studied, played, worked, and lived a wonderful second year of college life.

She Does All The Work

The FRESHMEN

College was new to us, but we soon found our way around. After Thanksgiving, upperclassmen started being embarrassed if they couldn't remember our names, and then we felt that we were really a part of Alabama College. We were a little frightened at first, but the orientation committee soon made us feel at home. Then the tests began. For a while, we almost wished we were at home again, but they were soon over, and life quieted down to the steady routine of classes, studying, and five-hour History. Our big night came when we had our class dance. The big Easter egg revolved to introduce the officers of our class, and the dance began. Amid the orchids, gardenias, and carnations we whirled until the gong struck twelve, when we retired to our rooms with nothing to do but talk until the next morning. We've had lots of fun, and we're looking forward to welcoming the freshmen next year.

ACTIVITIES

In 2000 A.D., they say, people won't need to have activities, because machines will do all the acting. All people will have to do is think. But we rather like it the way it is. It wouldn't be much fun to have a machine voting for you when you can have all the enjoyment of throwing balloons and playing records — all for your favorite candidate. Or it wouldn't be much fun to have a feeling-less, cold machine deciding what should happen to a student who make a mistake, in the place of a student court — impartial, but sympathetic, just, but not cold — And what would we do if we only had to push a button saying "Write script" for College Night in the stead of those sleepless, exciting bull sessions which are an integral part of College Night? It wouldn't be any fun to know that the ALABAMIAN or the MONTAGE was a product of machine labor instead of the product of breath-taking human deadlines — some of which were missed. Activities — the dates, the dancing, the plays, College Night, Crook Week, participation in Student Government — is all a part of college life that we wouldn't want to give up, even in the name of progress.

The Executive Council really went to town this year on plans for making Alobama College an extra-special place to study and play. One of its largest duties was the planning of the S. I. A. S. G. conference which was held on the campus in April. The key speaker ot the conference wos Harold Stassen, President of the University of Minnesota. The college was hostess to 55 Southern colleges.

In August the Executive Council sent an observer to the National Students' Association at the University of Illinois.

Another big event of the year was the adoption of the officiol college b'azer. Forest-green with white piping, and emblazoned with the official crest, the blazers were seen all over the campus.

The biggest job that the Executive Council undertook was the discussion of College Night regulations. Starting early enough to avoid factional feelings, the Council discussed each new regulation that hod been recommended by the College Night Evaluation Committee — a committee of faculty and student leaders closely connected with the preceding performance. Over spaghetti suppers and refreshments at Miss Compton's—director of College Night activities—as well as in business meetings and individual rooms, the discussion and debate continued until the regulations as approved by the Executive Council went to the Senate.

Other plans under discussion in the Executive Council were the Jimmy Dorsey dance, a college guest house, the dormitory telephone problem, a campus community chest, Saturday-night movies, and campus bulletin boards.

Many of these plans were carried to completion. The Jimmy Dorsey donce was a great success. Under the choirmanship of Doris Nelson, compus Social Chairman, the dance committee made complete arrangements for the event.

The Recreation Associotion sponsored the Saturday night movies in Palmer. These movies are well-attended and offer a welcome relief from the commercial Saturday-night cowboy shows.

In March the remaining problems were turned over to the incoming officers of S. G. A. to continue the progress made.

STUDENT SENATE

The first officiol business conducted by the Student Senate consisted of election of Senate officers, opprovol of Student Government budget, and discussion of the rules and regulations for the year 1949-50. At the recommendation of the Executive Council, the activity point system was abolished. Regulations governing Crook Week activities were presented to the Senate and approved. One of the outstanding duties of the Senate was the approvol and setting up of regulations for the 1950 College Night.

STUDENT COURT

Behind the effective functioning of Student Government at Alabama College lies the honor code system, which is enforced by the judicial branch, the Student Court. This year the court has placed great emphasis on the personalization of the honor code, and on the development of the individual student's awareness af the vital role an honor code plays in any philosophy of living.

The ALABAMIAN was noted for its efficient organization this year, making that deadline without burning so much midnight oil. With the co-operation of an efficient staff, Editor Greer added new touches to the paper that made it worthy of circulation.

Every other Friday, a paper full of campus, local, and national news went out to students, parents, and other colleges. The ALABAMIAN corried editoriols and articles on the controversiol issue of the chonge in College Night regulations. "Views in the News" kept students informed of up-to-dote state ond national news, while "They Soy" reflected the opinions of A.C'ers on various subjects.

Thanks to the combined efforts of editor and stoff, the ALABAMIAN hod o most successful year.

The editorial staff made a genuine effort to include pictures of all students on the campus. The photographers stayed on the campus an extra day to insure each student's appearance in the class section.

Partially financing the publication of the MONTAGE by advertising, the business staff staged a whirlwind campaign in Montevallo and Birmingham. Pictures were used in the advertising section — an innovation which should relieve the monotony of an advertising section.

The Y. W. C. A.

The Y. W. C. A. opened its program for the year with Freshman Orientation in the fall. The "Y" annual convocation also came soon in the school year at which time the "Y's" program for the year was outlined for the freshmen and incoming students. Commissions, including Social Responsibility, Personal and Campus Affairs, Christian Faith and Heritage, and World Relatedness — began meeting October 4th and met every other Tuesday thereafter.

The W. S. S. F. drive was held in October and met with unprecedented success. A total of eight hundred and fifty-five dollars was raised — the largest amount ever raised for this purpose at Alabama College. A party was given for the foreign students in October. The Annual Christmas party for the servants took place in December with Santa Claus and all the trimmings. Religious Emphasis Week, sponsored by the Religious Council, was held in mid-November. Nine religious leaders visited the campus and led the seminars, morning worship services, and dormitory discussions. Evening Watch was held in all dormitories every week day from September through May. The Sis-Major, Sis-Minor program also operated for the entire year beginning with the Sis-Minor party on the first Saturday in September.

The COLLEGE

With Dr. Trumbauer as president, the Theatre Council is the core of College Theatre work on the campus. Its aims are to elevate and develop dramatic endeavor at Alabama College, to co-ordinate the campus dramatic program as a whole, to further true appreciation of theatre arts, and to reward those of active interest in theatre for their efforts, service, and accomplishments by admission to its membership. To be eligible for membership in the Theatre Council, students must have participated in some copacity in at least two productions. The Council is divided into committees necessary for the production of plays — play selection, housing, box office, staging, art, lighting, make-up, coustuming, and properties.

The College Theater presented four plays during the year. The first play of the season was "He Who Gets Slapped," a philosophical play written during the turbulent, depressive period of Russian history.

"Lady Precious Stream" is a humorous Chinese play. The stage was bare at the beginning of the play, and necessary properties were supplied by the property men as needed. Another humorous play was "Wappin' Wharf", a story of pirates. The last play of the season was Shaw's "Candida", in which Rusti Rankin and Dean Swindle starred.

The TOWER rolled off the press, for the second time since 1941, in the spring of this year. This publication was revived in 1949 by Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalism fraternity, with the purpose of encouraging students to write creatively.

Students contributed a wealth of material. Afterwards, it was read and considered by an editorial board and passed on to Mr. Robert Payne, faculty adviser. The material selected was chosen for the literary qualities it possessed and for its representation of all the material submitted.

At Crook Convocation, May 4, 1949, the doors were stormed by two clans of rough, rowdy "mountaineers", the "Jiners" and the "Sinners", formerly the Junior class of Alabama College. These two clans entered Palmer noisely. At the close of the Convocation, the lowly Pichiciagos wore blue jeans, white shirts, black ties, stockings and tennis shoes, paper dots all over arms and legs, white cotton tails, large paper ears, 13" noses, a keg around the neck, and were to carry a tin bucket and a 13" ruler. Some of the outstanding Crook Week activities were: a Civil War, a Gay 90's Tennis Match, a Dark Town Poker Club Party, and a fashion show featuring the 10 worst-dressed. The sacred crook was found along the hedge-row in the far corner of the campus, and Crook Week was over.

FEATURES

Beauty was a feature of the Alabama College campus in 1950. As the forty candidates for beauty paraded before the judges on October 15 it was a hard choice to make. The MONTAGE staff sponsored Elite Night. The artists worked hard to produce a beautiful blue and black stage setting for the candidates, who descended from the ramp, over which hung a huge silver ball. Before the beauties were chosen by the judges, the student body had voted on the most outstanding seniors in each field of work offered by Alabama College — the Elite. Then the beauties appeared — ten from each class. After semi-final selection, the judges made the final choice. On the following pages are the six beauties and eight favorites of Alabama College.

SPORTS

In co-operation with the Department of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, the Recreation Association offers a wide variety of sports activities. Intra-mural sports, Sports Day, volleyball, basketball, table tennis, badminton, tennis, modern dance, social dance, swimming, and bowling are among the activities in which each student is urged to participate. Outings at the camp house — an ideal spot to "rest" — are pleasures which no Alabama College girl dares miss.

Perhaps, in 2000 A. D., a shot of vitamins and other health-giving minerals will suffice for the student of tomorrow, but — for today — we like to have our health program interspersed with a lot of fun.

It's a moot point

At 3:30 on that Thursday, classes were dismissed and by 3:45 every student was participating in the activity of her choice — and more than that, she enjoyed it! Activities ranged from table tennis to softball — from square dance to horseshoes. A faculty-student softball game, a faculty tennis exhibition and, to complete the afternoon of activities, a picnic singing was held. At this time, also, the awards were given to the winning teams and the individual winners of different sports.

All work and no play makes Jill a dull girl — so, to keep the girls both healthy, wealthy and wise, the Recreation Association in collaboration with the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, sponsored and made available to the students of Alabama College an extensive and well-rounded sports program. This intramural sports program started off in the fall with a big bang — the first activity being volleyball. After weeks of practice, the taurnament was held with Tutwiler emerging victor. The next all-campus event was the newly initiated Sports Day.

Tournament Day

Next on the sports calendar was the annual tennis tournament. The tournament was officially begun with a faculty exhibition match on the opening of the new courts. A beginners, intermediates and advanced singles tournament was held, fallowed by the doubles tournament. Approximately seventy-five students entered the taurnament.

MODERN DANCE

The modern dance division of the Physical Education Department is one of the most popular in the curriculum. Classes are held in the fully equipped dance studio, but on warm spring days blue-leotoded figures can be seen doing, "run, run, leap" outside on the smoothly-cut green lawn.

The modern dance curriculum is divided into three stages: beginning, intermediate, and advanced. The fledgling dancers learn the fundamental techniques and basic composition, the intermediates concentrate on developing skill and aptitude, while the advanced group expand their interest to the philosophy and history of dance and do actual construction of percussive instruments.

The proficient students of modern dance have a main ambition of being invited to join Orchesis, the national modern dance fraternity. In mid-winter Orchesis presents an evening recital which is composed by the members under the direction of their advisor, Miss Heatherington; at Christmas the dance club was an artistic addition to the program and they gave a performance at Easter Vespers.

The highlight of this year's activities was the participation of Orchesis members, as representatives of A. C., in the million-dollar "Make Mine Cotton" festival in Birmingham. The "Rhapsody in Blue" and Hindu dances were choreographed by the students themselves.

Yea Main! Yea Tutwiler! This year the Recreation Association initiated its new point system for participation in activities sponsored by the Association. The dormitory accumulating the greatest number of points during the year wins the coveted trophy awarded by the Association.

The year's activities started with Sport's Day in which the entire student body participated. Softball, volleyball, tennis, square dancing, archer, tumbling, modern dance, and all types of recreational sports were featured.

Other entertainments sponsored by the Recreation Association — a barn dance step-singing, the newly organized bowling club, bridge tournament and the new feature of Saturdoy night movies were enjoyed by all.

Perhaps one of the most welcomed contributions made by the Association this year were the improvements of the Camp House — new curtains, games, cooking equipment, color of furniture, and a phonograph-radio combination.

Winners of the different tournaments were: Volleyball, Seniors; Basketball, Freshmen; Tennis, Clara Gamble, Pat Seymour, Mollie Ogletree. Gamble ond Sarita Behar won the doubles tournament.

During the month of December, the basketball tournament was held. This was one of the most outstanding competitions staged. Although the Seniors were victors in the traditional Junior-Senior basketball game, they lost to the eager Freshmen in the championship game.

Next on the roster of events came badminton. After four weeks of practice and tournament play, Clara Gamble was victorious over Elizabeth Stillman by the game scores 11-4, 11-4. An archery field day was held Saturday, May 13, with all types of archery games and stunts being performed.

Cope goes over

The softball practices began the first week in April. The tournament started the second week in May and the results are not known at this time.

Besides these major activities, other interesting events occurred. Bowling club, trips to the Camp House, the National Archery Telegraphic tournament, hikes to the many interesting points in the near-by territory.

Honorary ORGANIZATIONS

It seems at times that activities, classes, College Night, discussions, and other pastimes of the campus take up all our time, but we still have club meetings to attend. Honorary fraternities give goals toward which each student works. Their purpose is to foster intelligent living and to promote interest in scholarship. Membership in a honorary fraternity gives each student an opportunity for fellowship. There is always a pleasant glow — a sense of achievement — when that little card — "Omega Omega Omega invites you to be a member ." is put into your mail box. Perhaps, in 2000 A. D., there will be no need for visible evidences of outstanding work, but we hope that the little lamp of Pi Delta Epsilon and other symbols of honors made will still be burning merrily.
